Mary Blodgett
 LOS ANGELES — (AP) Atty. Cartis C. Taylor, last week, filed the will of the late Chas. S. Blodgett, who passed recently. An undetermined cash sum besides valuable residence and income property worth many thousands of dollars.

This represented long years of effort, foresight, determinedly earned-out success, and thrift by this pioneer businessman, and prominent citizen.

The will for the large estate was drawn up on June 8, 1944, listing the following heirs:

Mrs. 1-11-52
 Mrs. Mary Blodgett, wife, of 2171 W. 29th Street; Mrs. Mary B. Watkins, daughter, 2931 Louis Ave., Hayward, Calif.; Harry Blodgett, a son, 1867 W. Jefferson Blvd.; Chas. S. Blodgett, Jr., a son; Cecilia B. Broussard, a daughter, of 432 E. 43 place and Wesley C. Blodgett, a son, of 1310 N. Arroyo Blvd., Pasadena.

Blodgett, who passed at the age of 80, was for many years associated with a surviving brother, Louis Blodgett, president of the Liberty Savings and Loan Association. This located in the famous Blodgett first time in April of last year and in December we were separated again and the home was broken up!

I went back to him to live with his parents, with his sister keeping our furniture until further arrangements could be made. But he wouldn't try to do anything about getting a place. He would just talk of the place that we had that I had left.

Florida Negro Receives $180,000 Inheritance

By Associated Press

MIAMI, Fla., May 27.—A Negro migrant worker has come into $180,000 through court approval of an agreement to divide an estate.

Zeke Campbell, 56-year-old son of D. A. Dorsey, pioneer Miami real estate owner, received the approval in County Judge W. F. Blanton's court yesterday.

Mr. Campbell had been fighting in the courts for three years, claiming a third interest in Mr. Dorsey's estate, variously estimated as worth between $750,000 and $1 million.

Mr. Dorsey's death in 1940 was followed within three months by that of his second wife, Rebecca Dorsey, leaving as sole heirs an adopted daughter Susan and Mr. Dorsey's missing son by a first marriage—Zeke.

(The son Zeke bears the surname of Mr. Dorsey's first wife rather than Mr. Dorsey's.)

Just as the search was about to be abandoned, Mr. Campbell was found, begging his way through a hard life at nearby Hallandale.

Susan and her guardians opposed the claim which Mr. Campbell's attorney, Henry M. Jones, pressed successfully through County and Circuit Courts. The case was before the Florida Supreme Court when attorneys agreed on the settlement.

'Zeke' Dorsey 'Wins' $180,000

By JOHN A. DIAZ

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla.—"Zeke" Campbell Dorsey, 56, after being pampered, fed and "protected" by white folk in this small town in the wake of his inheriting a quarter of a million dollars, was awarded $180,000 last week in Miami. This sum represents a third of his father's estate.

Zeke lived in Hallandale, six miles from here, for forty-one years in obscurity, and no one questioned his sanity or competency as a citizen until someone told him that he was Ezekiel Dorsey, and the son of Dona Albert Dorsey, Miami Negro who had accumulated a million-dollar estate before he died Feb. 29, 1940. Dat. 6-7-52 Zeke was told by a judge here that he must remain in county jail until a court hearing to determine whether he is mentally incompetent.

D. A. DORSEY'S adopted daughter, Bethune-Cookman student Dana Susie Augusta Dorsey and her guardians opposed the claim which Zeke's attorney Henry M. Jones, pressed successfully in Judge Blanton's court and, later, in Judge Grady L. Crawford's Circuit Court.

It was before the Florida Supreme Court when the attorneys agreed upon the settlement.

They decided, in effect, that Zeke is better off to take what he can get now than to fight two more years in financial need in the hope of getting more money than he could possibly spend in his lifetime.

THE AGREEMENT calls for and immediate reappraisal of all property in the Dorsey estate and a further payment to "Keke" of 10 per cent of any amount over $600,000.

It provided for payment of $80,000 immediately and $100,

Dat. 6-7-52 within thirty days. One-third of his inheritance will be placed in the First National Bank in Fort Lauderdale, as guardian of his estate. The settlement also was approved by "Zeke's" personal guardian, Foster Ingalls, white.

Ottawa Business Man Leaves $50,000 Estate

J. H. Wilson Had Large Holdings In Kansas Town

By LOIS M. SMITH

OTTAWA, Kas.—An estate valued at more than $50,000 was left by John H. "Bud" Wilson, veteran Ottawa blacksmith, who died January 28, according to Elisha Scott, of Topeka, attorney for the estate. In addition to this an undetermined but "substantial" amount of cash was left on hand, the attorney stated.

The estate, built up through 54 years of conscientious labor, includes some 25 or 30 dwellings and business places in Ottawa. Scott stated that one-half the estate will go to the widow, Mrs. Bertha L. Wilson. The remaining half will be divided among the couple's six children.

The qualities of cheerful industry, native good judgment, business integrity and conscientious thrift, which enabled him to amass a comfortable estate for his family, were coupled with pride, wisdom civic leadership and religious zeal.

These qualities gained him the respect of the entire community, white folks and colored, alike. One of the largest crowds ever to attend a funeral in Ottawa assembled to pay final tribute to the aged business man. Nearly two hundred telegrams of condolence came to the bereaved family from all parts of the country.

Mr. Wilson was the youngest and only free-born one of 15 children born to slave parents in Missouri. From the time of his father's death when he was seven, he began earning money.

First he learned to roll cigars from tobacco his widowed mother raised. His formal education ceased at an early age when he acquired a step-father who considered school a waste of time.

He learned the blacksmith trade by working in the Ottawa shop of an older brother. Extra money he earned by whittling such objects as canes, mandoline, guitars and small pieces of furniture. A natural musician, he once ran a small circus for fun and profit for a short time.

When the blacksmith shop burned, Mr. Wilson, still a youth, found machine shop work and worked beside grown men in ditching, sewer and rock quarry work until he had saved money to buy one lot. On this lot he built his own blacksmith shop.

Wilson often worked from dawn until late at night in his shop, but he refused to work on Sundays, even for the occasional bonus offered by customers in a hurry. "If it can't wait till Monday," he always said, "then you'll have to get it done some place else."

Sunday always saw him in church with his family where he sang in the choir. He was the oldest member of the Ottawa St. Paul A.M.E. church when he died. To him his religion was a joyful experience.

Mr. Wilson always liked horses which partly explains his liking for his work. During the years before motorized farm machinery came into use, the many farm horses from miles around provided plenty of work in horse-shoeing. He always wore work pants rather than overalls and was never seen at work without his small black string tie.

Before the days of cars, the Wilson family always had good horses for riding and driving. On Sunday afternoons the family enjoyed rides about town and into the country in the surrey.

His family recalls that he could make almost anything with his hands. When the Wilsons set up housekeeping he made the knives and forks, other equipment and most of their furniture. Still stored in the home is the first baby buggy the family possessed which he made.

He taught his three sons the blacksmith trade but would never permit them to miss school for work. He believed in education and continually impressed upon his children the necessity of an education. He told them that as time went on it would become increasingly difficult to get ahead in the world without one. He never ceased to regret his lack of formal schooling.

His children respected his wishes by continuing their schooling. Five of them became educators. Two of the sons are college professors at the present time. The third son, who has been a teacher, remained to help his father in the smithy after his return from army service.

His children say, "We never questioned his wishes for we recognized his wisdom." They give much credit for their success in life to his inspiring heart-to-heart talks.

Although Mr. Wilson had little formal education his alert mind readily grasped the ideas he got from reading. He seemed to have a natural flair for words and enjoyed filling speaking engagements, among various groups. He had given commencement addresses at Kansas Technical college, Topeka, among others.

Mr. Wilson enjoyed travel. Each summer the entire family took time to take a trip together. They had traveled through most of the states and some of them several times. One one trip they went to the World's Fair in New York City.

He had wanted to go abroad but would not go without Mrs. Wilson, who had no such desire. As late as last Christmas time he had spoken of wanting to take a trip to Cuba. He had hoped to travel a great deal by plane.

Mr. Wilson took an active part in politics. His opinions were respected by white leaders, who felt free to consult him concerning public opinion in his section of the city.

With all his many activities, the versatile blacksmith found time to work consistently in his Masonic lodge. He was Past Worshipful Master and was the proud possessor of a 50-year-pin.

Death came to the aged man following an illness of one week. He worked in his shop until that time. He never planned to retire. He often said, "When a man quits work he begins to die."

His family likes to recall his devotion to them. They refer to him as a "family man." The family worked together as a group and enjoyed the same pleasures. Mrs. Wilson had always kept in close touch with his work and helped him in all ways possible. In late years the daughter, Miss Freda, has been of inestimable help in administering business affairs.

The highly respected citizen was a man of conviction. He had little respect for a man who could not make up his mind. He always advised his children to get the facts in a case and then to decide on which side they stood.

A favorite verse he often repeated to his children was,

"Not in the crowd
That throngs the street,
But in thyself,
Triumph or defeat."

A floral tribute planned by the family in the form of a wheel, for the funeral, symbolized the family circle. White snapdragons formed the rim representing the widowed mother. Pink snapdragons formed the six spokes representing the six children. Yellow daffodils formed the broken hub in memory of the deceased father.

The six surviving children are sons, J. Erod Wilson, dean of AM & N college, Pine Bluff, Ark.; Claude L. Wilson, faculty member, Prairie View A & M. college, Prairie View Texas; and Lloyd H. Wilson, former educator, Ottawa; daughters, Mrs. Leta Wilson Allen, former teacher, Denver, Colo.; Miss Cozetta Z. Wilson, manual arts therapist, Tuskegee veterans hospital, Tuskegee, Ala.; and Miss Freda Wilson of the home.

The entire community was saddened by the death of their friend. All unite in saying, "He was a good man."

He was bequeathed a three-story house 30 years and furnishings at 3800 Warwick. Nine employed girls are now and $10,000, which will be paid at living in the house, the legatee said. ## Buy's Exclusive Beach Resort

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (GLOBAL) — What appears to be the biggest financial transaction ever made by a lone Negro took place last week when J. C. Forbes, prominent showman and producer, brought out the interest of his two white partners and became sole owner of Forbes Beach, located in Madison Township in New Jersey. The property, which was purchased last year for a reported $85,000 is now estimated to be worth more than $100,000.

The beach covers 42 acres and has a quarter of a mile of surf. It has a huge club house with hotel, restaurant, bar and grill, night club and dance hall. There are two cottages with 14 rooms, landscaped garden and facilities to accommodate 2,500 persons a day. The resort will be open the year around.

Mr. Forbes formerly owned the famous Pasadena Clubs in Newark and California, the Oriental Gardens in Washington and Richmond, and the Havana Gardens in New York. For the past 30 years or more, he has produced and promoted variety shows.

The State Department of Health has announced that the Raritan Bay waters, on which Forbes Beach is located, were tested and found perfect for bathing. An early report to the effect that the waters were polluted, had caused scores of bathers to be cautious about bathing in beaches along the New Jersey coast.

Mr. Forbes expressed a desire to make the resort the finest in the East, and strictly interracial.

Former Oil Magnate Wins $20,000 Suit On Tax Assessment

TULSA, OKLA.—(AP)—Luther Tucker, of Chicago received a check for $20,408 from the Federal government as over assessment on income taxes and interests covering the years 1916-1923.

In 1950, Tucker found he had made an overpayment of more than $12,000 and filed a suit in the Federal court in Tulsa. Interest on the sum amounted to $7,585.

Tucker, who at one time owned an oil-producing estate in Creek County, Okla., made a recent trip to Tulsa where he received the $20,000 check.

~~Black Diamond~~
Refund Paid Former Oil-Rich Creek Freedman

TULSA.—Luther Tucker, now of Chicago but formerly of Muskogee, was in Tulsa Saturday to pick up a check for $20,408.93.

The check was issued to Mr. Tucker by the federal government as over assessment on income taxes for the period from 1916 to 1923. The payment ended a suit instituted by Mr. Tucker in November, 1950.

Mr. Tucker, a native of Creek County, was at one time the owner of 160 acres of oil-rich land. He was one of a small number of Muskogee Negroes who became nationally known as "Oklahoma millionaires." They garnered and spent huge fortunes from oil leases and royalties.

In 1950, Mr. Tucker discovered that he had paid the federal government too much income taxes for the period mentioned above. With the aid of a lawyer, he estimated the surplus at $12,825.20. It was a neat Christmas present.

He instituted suit in the federal court here. An audit was ordered and the report was in favor of Mr. Tucker. Interest owned by the government was computed at $7,585.73, which brought the payment to $20,408.93.

Maid Finds Lifeless Form When She Called Deceased To Breakfast

EARLSBORO.—Death came to Forest Anderson, 78, reportedly the richest Negro in Oklahoma, sometime Tuesday morning, according to a telephone conversation with his daughter, Miss Ethel Anderson, Wednesday afternoon.

Miss Anderson, who teaches school in the neighborhood, says she left home around 7:30, and entered her father's room before leaving, and found him sleeping, but the maid who entered to call the deceased to breakfast, went to the bed after repeatedly calling him and found him cold in death. Physicians when later called, said Anderson died of a heart attack.

Anderson was one of the most successful farmers in Oklahoma and owns more than 2,000 acres of land, much of it in the old Seminole oil field. In addition he owns the bank at Boley and has other valuable real estate holdings in several cities of the state.

The deceased came to Oklahoma from Sheldon, South Carolina in 1907, locating in Seminole county where he remained until the time of his death. Several children from various sections of Oklahoma are on their way to Oklahoma to attend the funeral, which was held at Earlsboro Monday afternoon.

$200,000. A friend of Dr. Kuhn's for about six years, Sims says they met when the dentist wanted some carpentry done on his houses.

He declared that Dr. Kuhn had complained that another carpenter had fleeced him. He promised Sims that if he would look after him and his properties, he (Dr.
Kuhn) would take care of him.

Collected Rents For Him

After the first carpentry work that Sims did for Dr. Kuhn, he began doing odd jobs for him and then collected some of his rents for him. These amounted to $200 or $300 a week Sims told officers who informed him of the re-cluse's death.

The handyman also explained that Dr. Kuhn's wife had died many years ago and that his son had died a few years ago.
There were no children or other relatives left.

Chief hobby of the elderly man was acquiring toys, broken elec-

Faith Renewed

Mrs. Anna Dupree and her husband of Houston, Texas, are colored millionaires, who pulled themselves up by their own bootstraps. Sharing their wealth, they've contributed $20,000 to home for the aged, $20,000 to a home for the neglected and abandoned colored children of Houston, and $11,000 toward a dormitory at Texas Southern university—all within three short years. But, since most of the brothers are not willing to share a vote for the welfare of the race, Chum, we're booked to "KEEP 'EM JUMPIN' STEADY." The race stands or falls together.

Strange As It May Seem, Texas Has More Negro Millionaires Than Any State Says Ebony

Chicago, Ill.—Fabulous Texas often regarded as the land of miracles, can boast of another extraordinary accomplishments when it begins tabulation of its colossal achievements.

Here in this giant state—where the Negro is still confronted with segregation, poll taxes and discrimination—there are more Negro millionaires than anywhere else in the nation.

This "miracle" so to speak, is revealed for the first time in the lead article in the current issue of EBONY Magazine, leading Negro publication in the world.

The amazing story of how a number of Negroes accumulated great wealth in the state of Texas has never been told before now. "The reason for this is quite simple," reports EBONY. They wanted to stay out of the limelight because they were fearful of retribution from jealous whites.

Some of the old-timers still insist on staying out of the limelight, so much so that they still live rather frugally with their millions, says EBONY. But the younger Texas millionaires live just like any other millionaires, wearing their wealth for the world to see. "Wealthy cowboy scions often wrestle steers while wearing huge diamond rings, $50.00 Stetson hats, and $200.00 hand made boots," says the magazine.

EBONY tells about 81-year-old Mrs. Pinkie Taylor, who owns over 60 oil wells, yet enjoys doing menial work as hired hand.

There is the rich and politically powerful Bellinger family, regarded as the most influential Negro family in the southwest. They publish a Negro weekly in Texas.

While many Negro families Texas are rich because of inheritance of oil-rich lands, others have made it as a result of their own pioneering efforts such as Leo D. Fontinenot, one of the biggest rice growers in America. More than 30 years ago he purchased five acres of land at $35.00 an acre in Jefferson County. Now Fontenot owns hundreds of head cattle, over 3,000 acres of rich farm land and oil wells—with the land worth $150.00 to $200.00 an acre.

There is Leon Fisher, who migrated to Overton, Texas 26 years ago from the north, married a member of a rich oil family and then started his own laboratory to produce waxes from crude oil. He made a fortune out of the laboratories and today is regarded as the most brilliant Negro businessman in Texas.

And finally there is Major Kennedy, typist of the oil millionaires. Kennedy, typist of the oil millionaires, the age of 70, owns over 72 oil wells, has large herds of cattle and owns the town of Easton.

Signing Of Check Settles How Money Will Be Handled

Liberty — Leon Mitchell took his pen in hand Friday and calmly endorsed a check for almost half a million dollars to be placed in a trust fund for the benefit of heirs to the Orelia Mitchell 3-million-dollar oil estate, and his brother, Vic Mitchell, followed suit, ending a long drawn-out fight among heirs to determine how the money should be handled.

The check which had been already endorsed by the other heirs, was presented to the two brothers before Judge Penny Matthews during a hearing in 75th District Court. The hearing resulted from the refusal of Leon Mitchell and his brother Vic, to endorse the check in June of this year on grounds that the Gulf Oil Company should be required to pay 6 per cent interest for holding the check during the time the case was being fought all the way up to the Supreme Court.

Attorney D. F. Sanders and Alto Watson, of Beaumont who were retained by the Mitchell brothers to represent them, were denied their request for $20,000 attorney fees by Judge Matthews on grounds that the attorneys had not presented enough testimony to show that their services had "benefitted the estate." The judge, however, left the gate open for the two attorneys to produce the necessary testimony if they can. The $20,000 was a "chisel down" and Vic Mitchell are still trustees along with the American National Bank in Beaumont.

A Mr. Hughes, certified accountant from Beaumont, estimated the income tax on the money released Friday at approximately $130,000.

The case was carried to the supreme court after the trial court in Liberty and the Court of Appeals refused to act against Leon and Vic Mitchell's distributing fund out of the trust, as bonded trustees. The will of their mother, Mrs. Orelia Mitchell, which was probated in 1940, left the money in the fund so that the interest on it would benefit heirs clear down through great grandchildren.

The suit before the Supreme court was to prevent the distribution of money that was part of the

Ebony tells about Negro millionaires of Texas

CHICAGO, Ill.—Fabulous Texas, often regarded as the land of miracles, can boast another extraordinary accomplishment.

Here in this giant state, where the Negro is still segregated, there are more Negro millionaires than anywhere else in the country!

This "miracle" is detailed in the article in the current issue of Ebony Magazine.

The "amazing story" of Negroes who accumulated great wealth has never been told before now because, according to Ebony, "They wanted to stay out of the limelight because they were fearful of retribution from jealous whites."

Some of the old-timers still insist on staying out of the limelight, so much that they live frugally, says Ebony. Younger Negro Texas millionaires, however, live "just like any other millionaires, wearing their wealth for the world to see. "Wealthy cowboy scions often wrestle steers while wearing huge diamond rings, $50 Stetson hats and $200 handmade boots," says the magazine.

Ebony tells about 81-year-old Mrs. Pinkie Taylor, who owns over 60 oil wells, yet enjoys doing menial work.

There is the rich and powerful Bellinger family, regarded as the most influential Negro family in the southwest. They publish a Negro weekly in Texas.

While many rich Negro families of Texas inherited oil-rich lands, others have made it as a result of their own pioneering efforts, such as Leo D. Fontinenot, one of the biggest rice growers in America. More than 30 years ago Fontenot bought five acres of land at $35 an acre in Jefferson county. Now, he owns hundreds of heads of cattle and oil wells—with the land worth $150 to $200 an acre.

Leon Fisher migrated to Overton, Texas 26 years ago from the north, married a member of a rich oil family and started his own laboratory, producing waxes from crude oil. He made a fortune out of the laboratories and today is regarded as the most brilliant Negro businessman in all-Negro town of Easton, says Ebony.

Finally there is Major Kennedy, typist of the oil millionaires. Kennedy, at the age of 70, owns over 72 oil wells, has large herds of thoroughbred cattle and owns but the 1942 amendments specifically provided that the adopted child could inherit both from his adopted parents and through them from other relatives.

Under this construction of the law, the court ruled, the adopted son of Mrs. McFadden's brother is the only claimant to her estate, subject only to the courtesy rights of the husband.

In Virginia this is a life estate in all the real property owned by the deceased spouse when there are no children.

The estate became entangled in legal action when Nelson McFadden, manager of the real estate firm of J. C. Brooks & Co., had claimed the estate as the sole survivor. Prior to their marriage in 1942, Mrs. McFadden was the widow of J. C. Brooks, one of Norfolk's largest real estate brokers and investors.

MRS. McFADDEN died without making a will on July 1, 1948. Her estate consists of several parcels of real estate, mostly in the City of Norfolk, having an appraised value of $57,350, according to an inventory filed by Mr. McFadden as administrator.

Mrs. McFadden had one brother, Dr. Nelson F. McNorton, of Yorktown, Va., who died a few months before she did.

Neither had children of their own. An adopted son of Mrs. McFadden, Danny Brooks, was killed in an automobile accident about eight years ago. The present claimant was adopted by Dr. McNorton in 1933 when he was twelve or thirteen years old.

Mr. McFadden qualified as administrator and claimed the whole estate since Mrs. McFadden had left surviving her no children, no descendants of any children, no parents, no sisters or brothers, and no descendants of any sisters or brothers.

THE DECISION of the Supreme Court, written by Justice C. Vernon Spratley, pointed out that prior to 1942, an adopted child could inherit property from his adopted parents but not "through" them from relatives of the adopted parents.

Va. Heirs Break Will In $400,000 Estate Battle

P. J. G. - American
37 Va.
FAIRFAX, Va. — Judge Paul E. Brown last week in Fairfax circuit court set aside the 57-year-old will of an ex-slave to permit the selling of his 33-acre estate.

Judge Brown ruled in favor of three heirs of Frederick Foote Sr., who amassed property now valued at $400,000, although at the time of its purchase he was unable to read or write.

Bought For $500

The original purchase price of the property was estimated at $500.

Concurring in the proposal to break the will were his two daughters, Mrs. Margaret Foote Jackson, 65, of 516 Forty-fourth st., ne. Washington, D.C., Mrs. Virginia Foote Jackson, 83, and a brother, Frank C. Foote, 76, the latter two residing on part of the property.

Owe $6,000 In Texas

The heirs testified that the valuable land will soon be lost for non-payment of taxes in excess of $6,000, and which they are unable to pay.

The will originally prevented any of the heirs from selling or leasing any part of the estate, located at Seven Points, Va.

Worked Day And Night

Mr. Foote, According to Mrs. Margaret Jackson, purchased the land 88 years ago by working on the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal at night, on his daily farm chores had been finished.

Born in 1800 in Burke, Va., he was freed by President Lincoln's proclamation and fought with the Union Army.

Fairfax Circuit Court yesterday decided to overrule the 73-year-old will of a former slave which left 33 acres of now available land to his children but stipulated it could never be sold or leased. Post

The ex-slave, Frederick Foote, sr., bought the property at Seven Corners in Fairfax County for $500. An appraiser yesterday told the court the property's fair market value today is $400,000.

Judge Paul E. Brown appointed two commissioners to receive offers on the land, which now may be sold or leased on approval of the court.

Foote was born on the Sevenworth Farm, near Burke, Va., in 1800. Yesterday, his daughter, Mrs. Margaret Foote Jackson, 65-year-old Census Bureau employee who lives at 516 44th st. ne., said her father, a slave, obtained $500 to buy the land by working on the C&O Canal, selling wood and serving as a guide for Union forces during the first battle of Bull Run. He died in 1895.

Mrs. Jackson and two other children were litigants in the suit before the court yesterday. Mrs. Virginia Foote Jackson, 83, and Frank C. Foote, 76, both of whom live on the land now. All wanted the right to dispose of the land.

The children began to feel the pinch of their father's will two years ago. Before that, taxes on the strategically located but unimproved property ran about $350 yearly. But a reassessment now calls for more than $3000 in taxes annually.

Mrs. Virginia Jackson told the court yesterday she wished the court would sell or lease the land "so I could get a little place some place else." Frank Foote told Judge Brown he "just wanted to be able to pay the taxes I owe."

Judge Brown was able to grant relief because of a relatively new Virginia law that covers such cases. An appraiser yesterday said the land was worth: $3000 for one-tenth of an acre between the old and new Wilson blvds.; $172,000 for 6.5 acres between Wilson blvd. and Lee blvd.; $214,000 for 25.4 acres between Leesburg Pike and Lee blvd.; and $4000 for one and one-half acres adjoining the Williston apartments.
